Charles Sumner's Unhappy Marriage.

George W. Williams, a colored law-

senator rendered them as uncongenial as Mr. and Mrs. Dombey. She was fond of evening parties, and he would soon tire of their gayeties | Finding no one who could converse with or listen intelligently to him, he would retire in quiet to one side, and wait solemnly the pleasure of his lady. At times he would become impatiet at her delay, and would make special requests for her de-parture. They were granted usually at her pleasure, and their return home at such times was always conspicuous from its silence. Mrs Sumner had been accustomed probably to many indulgences CLOCKS, by her first husband, and liked to have the management of her household affairs. The arrangements of her husband suffered from this. The clippings he had made from books and newspapers and systematically arranged in rows on the wall, fastened by pins, did not escape her sense of order. "Why, said he one morning to Williams pac office, "my wife has swept all my clippings into the waste basket." They dil not remain together long. One day Summer came to his office with a darker cloud than usual on face A sittle later his wife's father came in and in tones half of alurm and half of inquiry, ex-claimed, "Mice less gone" "Yes sir," said Mr. Sumner in a voice of tragic sternness, "Alice has gone," and after ward he only referred to her from ne

In the summer of 1864, immediately mon hearing of the death of Col. From an of the 110th lil Vol. Mr. Rea went to Chattanooga after the body of his broth in law embalmed it and sent it to this county where it was laid to jest. After attending to this and duty. Mr. Rea, wish ing to see his sons Francis and David then in the Federal army bourded a train and traveled through Georgia Before he reached his destination the train was wiceked by a band of rebel guerillas and all on board made prisoners of war. Mr. Rea was confined four months in a vile prism at Cahawba, Alabama, when he succeeded in gaming his liberty by brib ing the rebel officers to procure his exchange for a rebel citizen then held by the Union forces, Coming home, he made a speech at Powers Hall which is doubt less fresh in the memory of many of our citizens. In politics Mr Rea was a daunch republican, and always voted the straight ticket, except in 1878 and 1874, when he voted with the Grangers Mr. Rea was a man of generous heart and halvery many warm friends He was pso by fitted by nature for the condition of life la which his latter years were ut ent, having tastes and desires which his lack of means prevented him from en loving. A Boy With a Heart.

From the New York Graphic The other day a bit of a boy called at the side door of a good-looking farm residence and told such a sorrowful story that the lady of the house was not stingy in throwing provisions into his basket. Happening to look into the front yard after a few minutes, she saw the strange boy mixed up with her three or four children, and she called out

"Boy, what are you doing here?" Feed'n these half starved children he promptly replied
